Workshops, case presentations, interactive activities and lectures targeted at physicians, nurses and non-physician healthcare providers. Stress is impacting physicians, causing burn-out, suicides and lack of satisfaction. Learners should leave this meeting with tools to help reduce stress in themselves and their patients. Tips for dealing with chronic issues including diabetes, ADHD and opioid use will be offered.
Dear Colleague:

While attending past years’ NHMS scientific meetings, I have come to enjoy the camaraderie and look forward to learning a few new things.

This year’s scientific meeting will have a little something for everyone. As we listened to past participants’ feedback, we learned that you wanted content that was current and relevant to practice. I think of this year’s meeting as being a potpourri for you as we have topics on treatment of ADD/ADHD, non-pharmacologic treatment of pain, diabetes updates, etc.

We also want to focus on aspects of practice, both current and future that may assist with adapting to the changes we face in medicine. We will learn of models to integrate behavioral health into pediatric practices; we will also learn about how artificial intelligence may impact care delivery in the near future.

Finally, we wanted to focus on you by offering yoga, a fun run and stress reduction for the physician. I hope you’ll consider joining us.
